

English Transition Task : Character Rucksacks

In English we love reading and want to learn all about the books you enjoy.

We want you to use your knowledge and inference skills to create the contents of a rucksack for your favourite book character.

You need to think about what your chosen character might have in their rucksack based on: their personality, their likes and dislikes and the events that take place in the book.

You can choose to draw , make or take photographs of real life objects for your items. Please include at least five items. You should then write a short explanation of your choices.

Our Example

Charlie Bucket from Charlie and the Chocolate Factory by

WAGOLL (What a good one looks like)

The character I have chosen to produce a backpack for is Charlie Bucket from Charlie and the Chocolate Factory by Roald Dahl. I chose this character as I love how much he cares about his family.

Using my knowledge of the book I chose to include a golden ticket as he wins the ticket to visit Willy Wonka's factory. I also included a cabbage as his family is so poor all they eat is cabbage soup and Charlie is so kind I can imagine him doing the shopping for his parents. The square of chocolate represents Charlie's love of chocolate but there is only one square as he has to make any chocolate he buys last for a long time.

I used my inference skills to include a photograph of Charlie's grandparents as we can infer he loves his grandparents as he sleeps on the floor while they sleep on the bed. The book of science experiments represents Charlie's curiosity about the chocolate factory and the many inventions in there.
